

RSM: Regional Course Descriptions

Personal Leadership Development (PLD)

This course runs throughout the OneMBA Program to help you link critical thinking, decision making, and effective implementation in the context of personal and organizational change.

Economics for Global Business Managers

Spectacular scandals have changed the global business environment dramatically, resulting in calls for increased regulation. In contrast, this course explores solutions based on the economic perspective that “people respond to incentive.”

Financial Statements and Control

This course deals with two topics: an introduction to financial statement analysis and an examination of the components of management control systems.

Managing Systems in Business

This course is intended to provide you with a different perspective regarding management and organizations.

Change Management

To assist with successful transformation projects, organizations should develop well-planned, well-executed implementation programs that prepare and enable stakeholders to address the change management issues that may arise.

Managerial Decision Analysis

This course presents the art and science of problem solving and decision making.

Mergers and Acquisitions

What is the driving financial force behind the large number of company mergers or takeovers? The answer lies in the creation of value for shareholders, but how does it work?

Business Negotiating

Negotiation is a fundamental and core process in society as a way of resolving conflict and solving problems between groups and individuals. It is an alternative to the use of the law, coercion or various forms of violence.

Topics in Global Business and Management

The rapid change of global business means that new perspectives are needed to prepare business and management.

The Future

Understanding the future global business environments provides insights into the requirements of business leadership in the new global economy. This module includes presenting an in-company action-learning project to a professional panel.